KEY PERFORMANCE INDICATORS

SUMMARY

Over the past 12 months, approximately $24.6 billion in assets traded across more than 3,600 transactions, encompassing about 316,000 rooms. Deal counts remain well below prior-cycle peaks, yet aggregate dollar liquidity has recovered more meaningfully, pushing average deal size higher. This gap highlights a market in which capital remains available, especially on the debt side, but is being deployed into fewer transactions.

Pricing metrics reinforce a sharp bifurcation across asset classes and markets. Average sale prices per room sit just above $110,000 nationally, but that figure conceals an exceptionally wide range. Economy and midscale assets frequently transact at prices well below $50,000 per room, while trophy luxury hotels clear at valuations surpassing $1 million per room. Cap rate behavior mirrors this dispersion. While national averages cluster near 9%, yields compress materially in high-barrier gateway, resort and coastal markets, even as secondary and tertiary markets continue to trade at double-digit cap rates. The coexistence of sub-7% cap rate luxury deals alongside deeply discounted distressed sales underscores how asset quality and location increasingly dominate price formation.

Luxury transactions in particular continue to command an outsized share of total dollar volume despite representing a small share of deal count. High-profile trades included the roughly $750 million sale of the Four Seasons Resort Orlando, the $350 million Four Seasons Jackson Hole transaction, and several large New York closings such as The New York EDITION, The Dominick, and the InterContinental Times Square. Additional concentration occurred in Phoenix and Miami, where the JW Marriott Phoenix Desert Ridge traded for $755 million and EAST Miami sold for $300 million. These transactions concentrated capital into a narrow set of gateway cities, resort destinations, and brand-forward assets, reinforcing luxury hotels as the primary destination for large-check equity.

Meanwhile, midscale and economy properties continue to drive transaction volume by count but contribute a much smaller share of total dollars, reflecting lower valuations and a more operations-driven buyer pool. Institutional and private equity owners remain net sellers, often exiting large or non-core assets, while a fragmented set of buyers acquires assets at reset pricing. Foreign investment remains present but muted relative to prior cycles, and transactions continue to clear at meaningful discounts to asking prices, consistent with lengthening time-to-sale metrics.

Looking ahead, transaction patterns suggest a gradual and uneven recovery rather than a rapid market reopening. Capital is active but remains highly selective, favoring large, high-quality assets where pricing adjustments support long-duration holds. Debt markets are wide open and can be characterized in the words of one broker: “For every horse a saddle”, meaning that debt is available across the price spectrum for almost any borrower.
